

Strategic System Review Update

The State System has been undertaking a review of how the Office of the Chancellor and all 14 universities are organized. This is a very important process that will help ensure that Millersville University and all State System universities are better positioned to serve students for decades to come. The National Center for Higher Education Management Systems (NCHEMS)—the consultant assisting with the review—has been meeting with students, faculty, staff and others and will continue those efforts in the coming weeks. They also want to hear directly from you!

NCHEMS has created a website through which you can track the status of the review and provide your insights and opinions about the future of our university and the whole State System. Take a minute now and share your thoughts at www.NCHEMSproject.com/system-review.
