

Announcing our Tenth Annual International Policy Conference

The national and international debate on immigration and the plight of refugees continues to be one of the most polarizing and important issues of our day. It is our hope that through this conference, our campus community is better equipped to understand and confront the individual and collective challenges we face on all fronts of the global migration crisis. From economics, to science, to security and human rights, each has an important role in accurately framing the issues and effectively shaping the policy prescriptions.
