West Chester University's Scholarship of Teaching, Learning, and Assessment (SoTLA) conference hosted by the Academic Affairs Division will focus on enhancing the faculty members view on student learning as it relates to assessment, classroom engagement, and online technology within the higher education community. The goal of this conference is to make the work of teaching, learning, and assessment public for continued professional development. The conference organizers for this event are the Teaching, Learning, and Assessment Center and the Office of Distance Education.

We are excited to announce our keynote Sarah Rose Cavanagh is currently on the faculty at Assumption College, where she directs the Laboratory for Cognitive and Affective Science and serves as Associate Director for Grants and Research in the Center for Teaching Excellence. Her teaching focuses on emotion, motivation, and neuroscience. Sarah's book, The Spark of Learning: Energizing the College Classroom with the Science of Emotion, is part of James Lang's series on teaching and learning in higher education at West Virginia University Press.

Consider attending to learn about new tools and strategies to implement for the Spring 2018 semester AND submit a proposal for peer review to present on the great work you are doing in the classroom to enhance teaching, learning, and assessment!
