As we all work together to help students Imagine the Possible, there are stories of faculty who have created scholarships that are truly making a difference. Below, please read about why Dr. Kerrie Farkas created the Eileen Carew Promising Writers Scholarship and see the impact it’s made on 2018 student recipient, Shaakirah.

Dr. Kerrie Farkas - English Department: “I created the award because I wanted to give back to students who work so hard for their degrees and their future. So many of our students need to work in addition to being full time students, and at the same time show so much promise. I wanted to establish the award to recognize students and to support their work. Although the English Department has numerous scholarships and awards, we didn’t have any awards specifically for students in the Writing Studies major, so I thought this would be a great addition to our existing awards. I named it after my mother because I would not be where I am today without her support.”

2018 Recipient of the Eileen Carew Promising Writers Scholarship

“Last year, I was fortunate enough to receive the Eileen Carew Promising Writers Scholarship as I have a strong love for writing and informing an unaware audience. Words are a powerful tool and the scholarship inspires me to continue following my passion with absolute motivation. I enjoy writing about sensitive topics that are overlooked by government officials, such as urban health and women’s basic rights. Because of this scholarship, I am forever grateful and one step closer to finding a job that allows me to write for groups of people that are often silenced and ignored.” – Shaakirah Ahmad-Tate
