Universal Design for Learning - What, How, and Why?

Matt Fox, Instructional Designer, Online Programs

March 10, 2020
Tuesday Common Hour
(12:05 – 1:10 PM)
McNairy 118

This workshop will explore the Universal Design for Learning Guidelines that are a “framework to improve and optimize teaching and learning for all people based on scientific insights into how humans learn.” We will discuss how we can take small steps to adopt this framework when designing learning opportunities in our face-to-face, blended, and online classrooms. Bring your ideas, bring your experiences, and share successes and challenges that have risen through using aspects of the UDL framework in our classrooms.
