Dear ‘Ville Community,

With international, U.S. and state-wide concerns about the outbreak of Coronavirus (COVID-19) and the current focus in the news on travel, I wanted to reach out regarding potential spring break plans.

Prior to traveling anywhere over spring break, please consider the potential risks that may be involved in visiting your destination, including the risk of transmission as well as the risk of quarantine upon return. Avoid places experiencing sustained community transmission. Keep in mind that guidance may change once you have arrived at your destination or returned home. Updated information on recommendations for travel can be found on the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC’s) website.

As you think ahead to your return to Millersville after spring break, please be aware that if you have been traveling in an area of known risk/exposure as defined by the CDC, you must contact Health Services prior to returning to campus for an initial phone screening. Given the incubation period of the illness, you will be advised to remain at home, off campus, for a 21-day self-incubation period. You will then be required to check in with Health Services prior to returning to campus to ensure you are asymptomatic.

Health Services and the University continue to monitor the situation and provide updates related to COVID-19.

As we head into mid-terms and spring break, please keep our EPPIIC values in mind in all that you say and do. Inclusion is at the core of Millersville University and it is important to treat our students, faculty and staff with the same respect that you would want in return.

Good luck on mid-terms and have a safe spring break.

Warm regards,

Brian Hazlett
