Will Lautzenheiser was chasing the loves of his life. When Will visited the hospital for what he assumed was a painful muscle pull, he had no idea that pain was being caused by a life-threatening bacterial infection. When Will's organs started shutting down, and his limbs began dying, doctors amputated his arms and legs to save his life. Filmed over four years, STUMPED explores themes of resilience, committed caregiving, and the life-changing potential of pioneering medicine.
