This Virtual World: Transformative Study Abroad during the COVID-19 Pandemic
Monday, Nov. 16, 2020 11:00 - 12:00pm
Prof. Chisomo Selemani, Associate Professor, Baldwin Wallace University

Study abroad is a high impact practice in which student’s perceptions of the world are challenged and changed. Faculty & staff facilitate these life-changing cultural and educational exchanges. What if we can still do that without leaving our homes? Virtual solutions have provided incredible opportunities for international engagement. Join us to gain some ideas of how to do these things and hear lessons learned from a successful virtual study abroad program in this session.

Fighting the Good Fight: Prepare for the International Education Challenges of the Next Four Years
Tuesday, Nov. 17, 2020 11:00 - 12:30pm
Marty Bennett, President of SMIE Consulting

November will produce one of two dramatically different realities for our country, our institutions, as well as current and future international students. We must realize the landscape of international student recruitment has been radically transformed over the past few years. As a result, having a global perspective on where we stand in the race for internationally-mobile students can provide the starting point for necessary next steps. What can we be doing to prepare? And, most importantly, how can we maximize international student success on campus?

Bringing The World to Campus: Impacts of Internationalization at Home
Wednesday, Nov. 18, 2020 1:30 - 2:30pm
Martin Tillman, President of Global Career Compass

Every academic institution is struggling during the pandemic to sustain its commitment to provide students with high-impact educational experiences - in and out of the classroom. The disruption due to Covid presents an opportunity to re-frame your traditional view of education abroad. To de-couple education abroad from its "home" in the international office, and consider "internationalization without mobility." This concept of internationalization-at-home has the capacity to promote greater inclusivity, foster the development of skills and competencies to successfully transition students to the workforce, and bridge the absence of experiential cross-cultural engagement abroad.

Click Here to Register

For more information,
Email: International@millersville.edu
Phone: 717-871-7506
Address: Lyle Hall, First Floor